This book explains success steps taken by one of the prominent leader in India.

He does not have the glamor of Hollywood heroes. He does not have a great ancestry. He does not have millions of dollars in his bank balance. He was born to a poor tea vendor in Gujarat, India. He sold tea in railway stations. He became a chief minister (equivalent to governor in the United States) and then prime minister (equivalent to the president in the United States) of India.

Narendra Modi is the fifteenth prime minister of India and a leader of the Bharatiya Janta Party. He also served as the chief minister of Gujarat from 2001 to 2014.

When Narendra Modi assumed the power of chief minister, people visited and requested he provide electricity at least during their dinnertime. Because of his hard work and determination, electricity is now provided twenty-four hours a day and 365 days a year in Gujarat, where getting electricity twenty-four hours a day had been a dream. As chief minister, Modi made it possible.

In India, where migration from rural villages to urban cities is common, Modi was able to reverse the migration in Gujarat. Gujarat was once a place where industrialists hesitated to invest; Modi was able to attract billions of dollars of investment to Gujarat. How is this all possible for a poor tea vendor? He had very little, but everything was waiting for him.

In Indian parliamentary elections, a single-party majority was impossible. In the past thirty years, no party had obtained a complete majority. The government was formed with a coalition of parties. Modi is the leader who brought a complete majority (a majority requires 272 parliamentary members; he was able to get 336 members) to a single party. With his landslide win in the 2014 Lok Sabha elections, Narendra Modi has rewritten the rules of the game and redefined Indian politics.

How all this possible for a poor tea seller?

Quotes from Narendra Modi:

1. Only person who can pull you down is yourself, you should never allow yourself to pull you down:
Narendra Modi.
