Paul is a student at college. If you were to ask him whether he enjoys school, he would say yes. Yet he is average on the academic side. His parents are confused. "I don't get it," Paul's father remarked to his wife. "Paul is a good student. He spends two hours going through his homework every day. He hardly watches TV or plays computer games or spends time chatting online. Yet his grades are just average."

"He's doing the best he can" his wife concludes. "We should not pressure our children".

Perhaps so, but are they using an effective system?

A major question in the minds of many well meaning parents is, "How do I help my child develop her maximum potential as a college or university student?"

Gone are the days when educational standards were low and university entrance was easily attainable. Today, competition between students is intense and success at school and university is the passport to many satisfying careers.

As parents we can do a great deal to bring out the best in our children-by helping them to understand themselves, enjoy school life and achieve success at the same time.

Unfortunately little has been done by schools or other parties to equip parents to effectively guide their children to navigate through school life.

This book will show you how to support your children at crucial stages such as preparing for exams or when they move from primary to secondary and to university studies.

As parents, we have invested time and effort in our children's development. It is true that tremendous changes have taken place in the educational system since the time when parents were students. For one thing, textbooks now are twice as thick compared to just 10 years ago!

Research has confirmed that we need to take an active role in our children's education if we want them to achieve their full potential. We need to understand the educational system ourselves to help them to adjust through changes taking place in school.

Learn how to motivate, encourage and help your children succeed-The fun and enjoyable way!.
